MONESSEN UP AGAINST DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

Board of Health and City Council Laboring Under Difficulties in Disposing of City's Garbage.

The most serious problem confronting the health board and city council at present is how to dispose of the garbage in a satisfactory manner. Much complaint comes to health officer Arner regarding the present service and it seems that there is no relief in sight. There is but one team now hauling and the distance being so great and the manner of disposition so unsatisfactory the accumulation of refuse has become so great that the citizens are becoming aroused and will demand that council take action at once to assist the board of health in providing a satisfactory service.

With one team hauling it is sometimes several weeks before the wagon visits certain sections and people are beginning to fear an epidemic during the extremely hot weather. All have not yet adopted the closed can as required by a recent act of the health board and the open barrel is still a menace in many places and must be done away with. It is said the matter will be brought before council at the next meeting in a very earnest manner and a demand made that action be taken that will result more satisfactorily.

Mayor Shutterly a few days ago received a communication from the Henderson Coal Company filing objections to the cremation of garbage over their property and warning the burgess that in case of fire in the coal mines, the borough would be liable for the damage done.

The Henderson Coal Company is the owners of the coal under the Luce farm and the borough has a lease of the land for a garbage dump from the Luce heirs. The communication was handed to the sanitary committee and the matter will be investigated. Secretary Arner has declared his intentions of compelling property owners around town to fill all holes where stagnant water accumulates, especially where residents have sent notices of complaint.

Mrs. C. M. Lamb will leave tomorrow for Culver, Ind., where Herbert is attending Culver Military Academy. The summer term ends August 28 and Mrs Lamb will attend the closing exercises.

The dance which was given at Eden Park last evening by the Souvenir Club of Monongahela proved to be quite an enjoyable affair, notwithstanding the weather kept many from attending Monessen was well represented

The Delta Alpha cook books have arrived and the young ladies are now selling them at fifty cents each. They contain many excellent receipts, mostly of home origin and every family should have one Help a good cause along.

Ladies are paying more attention to the line of toilet goods they use than formerly. Mr. W. P. Kirk of Kirk's Drug Store says he sells ten times as many toilet goods now as he did a few years ago. Perhaps Mr. Kirk's good goods has something to do with it.

Easy for Pirates.

The North Webster Juniors came to Monessen yesterday for the express purpose of putting the cleaner on the Pirates of this city but when it was all over they were decidedly sick of their job, and not without cause for the final score showed that the pirates had encircled the bases eight times while the Juniors had failed to count. One, Jene McKenna twirled for the Pirates and the way he soused the Juniors in the whitewash was a sight for sore eyes.

He did not allow them a safe hit. Pretty nearly every man on the Junior team took a turn at banding em up to the Pirates and they all got their bumps. The Pirates played an errorless game.

The Pirates play the strong Belle Vernon athletics Thursday at 6:15. Everybody come.

Formed A City League.

A city base ball league composed of four clubs has been formed at Monongahela. A schedule has been arranged and the season starts tomorrow. The league is made up of the Bankers, All Professionals, Clerks and All Woolers.

ARE HAVING A GREAT TIME.

Lynn's Grove the Scene of Much Activity on Account of Belle Vernon Merchants Picnic.

One of the most enjoyable picnics that has taken place at Lynn's grove the season is being held by the merchants of Belle Vernon and is now in session. All the places of business closed early this morning and merchants, their families and friends relinquished responsibilities and hied themselves to the woods to indulge in a days recreation.

The varions committees on arrangements did the work in a creditable manner and the great throng of people present all seem to be having a splendid time. A complete program was arranged and is being participated in in a general way. Excellent speaking was a special feature not to be overlooked.

One of the principal events was a public marriage which took place at 4 o'clock on the grounds. The contracting parties being Mr. Edward Mills and Miss Cora Neil. The ceremony was performed in the presence of about fifteen hundred spectators. Mr. Mills is a popular employe at the Tremont mines and Miss Neil is one of Belle Vernon's well known young ladies. Immediately after the ceremony the young couple was presented with a 26-piece flatware silver set and a 4-piece silver tea set purchased at the well known Jewelry store of E. M. Mover, Monessen.

The employes at the mines raised the funds by general contribution and Geo. Jenkins, Jacob Humphries, Samuel Edwards and James Bryan composed the committee who selected the articles and made the purchase. Supt Charles McKay of the mines made the presentation speech. The picnic is a success and reflects much credit to the various committees in charge as well as the business men in general of Belle Vernon.

Fell Through Steps.

Mrs. Harry Lebowitz met with a painful accident while coming down Fourth street steps last night which might have resulted more seriously. A step had been broken away and in the darkness Mrs. Lebowitz failed to notice it. The result was she fell through, badly spraining her right arm and sustaining several bruises more or less severe. She was assisted to her home and today is resting comfortably. Some day the borough will have a suit for damages on their hands if more care in matters of this kind is not taken

The Lamomt Sale.

The real estate of the late W. P. Lamont was offered for sale today by the administrator W. P. Lamont, Jr. It consisted of a house and lot on 3rd Ave and a vacant lot on 5th street. CHIEF OF POLICE WOOLSEY CAPTURES ALLEGED HORSE THIEF

David Bazier, Colored, Just Released from Greensburg Jail Arrives Home With Horse in His Possession.

David Bazier, colored, was arrested at his father's home, about a mile beyond Webster at 2 o'clock this morning by Chief of Police Woolsey on a charge of suspicion. Bazier just finished serving a three months sentence in the Greensburg jail yesterday for having broken into the People's Natural Gas Co.'s office at Webster, last March. When he arrived at his home in Webster about 10:30 last night he had in his possession a horse which he told the neighbors had been given him by a man, living along the the road from Greensburg, to keep for him until winter. Bazier told several conflicting stories with the result that the local police were communicated with and his arrest followed. Constable Wm. Evans of Webster assisted in the capture. The horse which is worth probably $50 was found in the stable and was brought to Monessen and turned over to a local livery man. When seen by an Independent man this morning, Baziers' story was not very well connected and he contradicted himself frequently.

He said that immediately upon his release from jail he started to walk to West Newton. He first stated that he got the animal from a man living about nine miles out of Greensburg but later said that the man lived at Tarrs Station.

When asked the man's name he said that he did not know what his name was but that the name Davis was on the mail box in front of the house. Bazier said that he stopped at the house for a drink and the man asked him if he knew of anyone who would care to take a horse to keep until winter as he (Davis) had three and had use for but two. Bazier according to his own story agreed to keep the animal and at once set out for his home. Bazier's father with whom he lives at Webster is a coal miner but the younger Bazier does not seem to bear any too good a reputation in and about Webster.

Chief of Police Woolsey is making an effort to locate the owner of the horse but although he telephoned to several of the towns through which Bazier stated he passed on his way to Webster, he could get no light on the matter, Bazier will likely be given a hearing this evening.

A PITTSBURG banker will retire from business. He says he needs the change. It has been the custom of retiring bankers to take the change with them.

THE quietus that has been put upon Westmoreland county politics goes to show that people over the county are pretty well satisfied with the regular Republican nominees and that at the fall election a strong Republican majority will result. The spring primaries caused one of the greatest political eruptions ever known, but it is believed that harmony will prevail this fall.

THERE is a movement on foot in many German cities to stimulate interest in decoration of houses. Prizes are given for the finest effects obtained with flowers so displayed, and much is expected in the way of brightening and adorning streets. Even in American cities, where trees, shrubbery and flowers are common in full view of the street in resident districts, much might be done to make business thoroughfares more attractive by the use of flowers in windows. It is in no sense inconsistent with the highest degree of business ability to take a deep interest in flowers and the beautifying of cities. POWER OF MIND.

Always a Valuable Asset in Presence of Danger.

Presence of mind is always an asset. It is especially valuable in presence of danger such as springs from the presence of men intent upon murder. This was never better exemplified than when a gang of men set out to take the life of Mazzini. He got to hear of their project. All the precautions he took was to get ready a store of very excellent cigars. The ruffians presently appeared at his address. "Come in, gentlemen," he said and produced his cigars. To each man he handed one. Taken aback at their reception, they seemed abashed and confused. "I know that you came to kill me," he said. "Why do you not proceed to your task?" This was too much for even this bloodthirsty deputation. They could not kill the man whose cigars they were smoking and who invited them to carry out their task. Muttering some excuse for having interrupted his studies, they shuffled out of the room and troubled him no more.

Each man has his own method with would be assassins. With Napoleon it was the eye which counted. While he was visiting the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha one of the duke's retainers made up his mind to slay him. He had so frequently heard the great man denounced as the curse of Europe that he felt impelled to seize the chance to destroy him. He was a common soldier at the time and had to do sentry duty in one of the corridors of the palace along which Napoleon passed. He put his finger to the trigger as the duke, accompanied by Napoleon, drew in sight. He aimed for Napoleon's heart. Napoleon saw him. He said nothing, but simply fixed his eagle eye upon the youth. The latter seemed spellbound. He let the musket fall with a crash to the floor of the stone corridor. He felt, he said, as if he must have swooned. Napoleon took no further notice, said no word, passed upon his way as if nothing had happened. That one flashing glance had saved his life. He knew its effect and value.—St. James' Gazette.

LANGUAGE EVOLUTION.

Use of the Sulfix "Less" in Verbs, Nouns and Adjectives.

Many will remember that some years ago there went on a violent controversy about the word tireless. The discovery had been made that "less" was a sulfix which could properly be appended only to nouns; hence the form must be discarded, and we must all take pains to say untiring. The duty of so doing was preached from scores of professional and newspaper pulpits. No one seemed to think or care for the various other adjectives similarly formed and therefore liable to the similar censure which they never received. Hostility was directed against it alone. The actual flaw which vitiated the arguments against tireless its censors never knew or took into consideration. This was that the fancied rule covering the creation of such words had practically long ceased to be operative whenever a new formation struck the sense of the users of language as being desirable.

Unquestionably in our earliest speech the sulfix "less" when employed to form adjectives was joined only with nouns. But the general sloughing off of nominal and verbal endings which went on in later centuries reduced a great proportion of substantives and verbs in the speech to precisely the same form. In consequence the sense of any fundamental distinction between the two broke down in many ways—in one way in particular. There is nothing easier in our speech than to convert a verb into a noun or a noun into a verb. It is a process which has taken place constantly in the past and is liable to take place at any time in the future, either at the will or the whim of the writer or speaker.—Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's.

A Horse Story.

Our Dumb Animals tells a remarkable story about the intelligence of a mare who saved her colt from death by stopping a train on a railroad in Texas. The colt had fallen with its legs through a railroad bridge, and the mother started down the track to meet the coming train. As the train came up she stood on the track whinnying. The train stopped, and then the mare trotted ahead of it as it moved slowly to the bridge. Here the colt was discovered and extricated from its perilous position. The story was vouched for by the engineer, railroad men and passengers in the train.

He Was at Church.

Saunders, the village slater, was a very poor attender at the church. One day the minister met him and said:

"Come, now, Saunders, why is it you are never at church nowadays?"

"Never at the kirk?" replied Saunders. "Ye're quite wrang there, sir; I spent the hale o' last week on the tap o't."—Glasgow Times.

This Was in 1806.

Says the London Times of May, 1806: "A decently dressed woman was last night brought out into Smithfield for sale, but the brutal conduct of the bidders induced the man who was, or pretended to be, her husband, to refuse to sell her; on which a scene of riot and confusion highly disgraceful to our police took place."

There's a Reason.

A Comprehensive Verdict.

A child in an English town was killed by a steam atomizing apparatus taking on it. The Key to a Fortune

[Original.]

John Nettleton was an inventor He invented a number of small devices for various purposes, but none of them turned out to be of value, or, if they did, some one who furnished the means to put them on the market reaped the benefit. Nettleton's wife and a girl she had adopted stood by him through all his disappointments. His son Peter, as soon as he became old enough to shift for himself, became a machinist and drifted away from home.

Peter knew enough of such matters to feel sure that if his father had invented means of overcoming the defect he had made a model of the contrivance. He and Maggie hunted all over the house for such a model. Every closet was ransacked, spaces under the eaves of the roof, cellar and workshop, to no purpose. The model was not to be found.

The pet scheme of John Nettleton's life was a machine for saving labor, the object of which he alone understood. While thus engaged he dreamed at night of great fortunes secured, or that some one was destroying his model just as he had perfected it. Often his wife would awaken him when he was struggling in nightmare. But before he accomplished his object she died, leaving no one but Maggie Thorpe, her adopted daughter, to care for him. She remained with him and was a perpetual bow of promise.

It was several years after his wife's death before Nettleton struck the fundamental idea of his machine. But on applying it he found that a device was necessary to overcome a defect which, though trifling in itself, rendered the machine useless. He worked three years over this and overcame it. Then he made a model of his machine, and a separate model of his contrivance to overcome the defect. He had been so swindled by persons appropriating his inventions that he chose to keep a key to this one, which would alone unlock the secret. The model of the machine he kept in his workroom. The model of the contrivance he kept no one knew where.

But with all his precaution John Nettleton never reaped the benefit of his invention. Death took him away so suddenly that he had no time to reveal to any one where he kept the model he called his key model. Peter was called home to bury his father and found nothing to represent an inheritance except a will bequeathing the little house and the invention to Maggie Thorpe. Peter saw the model of the machine, and, being a machinist, was delighted with it; but, setting it in motion, he soon saw the defect. It seemed a simple matter to remedy that, and he set to work to do so. Maggie told him that his father had done so, but she knew not by what contrivance.

Peter obtained employment near by and nights and holidays went to his father's workshop to find a remedy for the defect As his father had been encouraged by Maggie, so was the son She would go into the workshop, which was in the rear of the house, when he was there, and when she found him despondent would remind him that his father had overcome it, and what had been done once could be done again. Often late at night the shop door would open to reveal Maggie's sympathetic face while she held in her hand a plate on which she had placed a simple supper.

But Peter had not the genius of his father and at last made up his mind that if he did not give up hunting for the secret he would go mad. Then, and not till then, Maggie advised him to give it up and reminded him that there were fortunes to be made in other ways.

Peter decided to go back to the work he had done before his father's death, but when he came to part with Maggie he found that he had won a greater treasure than fortune- the heart of a pure young girl whose disposition would render her the most valuable of wives. With this discovery he made another- that he could not go and leave Maggie. He must take her with him.

Peter bought a plain gold ring which he took to Maggie. Not finding her in the house he went to the shop. She was there soldering a kettle that had become leaky Peter produced the ring and as he was about to slip it on her finger dropped it. It rolled into one of the great seams between the boards in the floor.

There was nothing to do but take up a board. Peter took up two and found the ring on a box placed between the joists. He took out both the ring and the box, and seeing that the latter was locked Maggie went for John Nettleton's keys, which she had kept since his death. She unlocked the box and displayed a model.

Something told them both at once that here was the missing key to a fortune. Taking out the model Peter turned with it to the model of the machine, but Maggie espied a paper in the bottom of the box.

God, if necessary, will direct my little girl to this

Peter saw at once how the connection was to be applied to the machine and catching up a screwdriver made the attachment. Then setting the whole in motion they both watched it working smoothly.

"Peter," said Maggie at last, handing him the paper, "see what your father said about our finding the key to a fortune."

"The key to a fortune," he said after reading it, "is often the goodness of a woman. At any rate it is so in this case." FLORA MILLIGAN.

A cure endorsed by thousands.
Read an old man's tribute.

Sidney Justus, fruit dealer, of Mentor, Ohio, says: "I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills of a severe case of kidney trouble of eight or ten years' standing. I suffered the most severe backache and other pains in the region of the kidneys. These were especially severe when stooping to lift anything, and often I could hardly straighten my back. The aching was bad in the daytime, but just as bad at night, and I was always lame in the morning. I was bothered with rheumatic pains and dropsical swelling of the feet. The urinary passages were painful, and the secretions were discolored and so free that often I had to rise at night. I felt tired all day. Half a box served to relieve me, and three boxes effected a permanent cure."

FAMOUS BALLET DANCERS.

Stories of La Taglioni, Fanny Elssler and Lola Montez.

It has been asserted that the grand ballet died when the famous Taglioni retired in 1845. At any rate, the ballet today is chiefly a spectacle of dress and colored limelight. Except for a very few performers, dancing as a high art has vanished.

There is no one now to set beside La Taglioni, who was the queen of the stage. Balzac introduced her into his novels. Even Thackeray condescended to notice her and declared enthusiastically in "The Newcomes" that the "young men of the day will never see anything so graceful as Taglioni in 'La Sylphide.'" At that time she was the rage. Stagecoaches and greatcoats were named after her.

La Taglioni owed her charm to a wonderful lightness and grace. Her style was rather ideal than realistic and voluptuous, as was then the vogue. The hideous ballet skirt of today she never wore, but a skirt that reached nearly to her ankles. It was one of the principles of her father, who taught her all she learned of the art, that the dancer should be modest in dress, in movement and in expression.

Another famous master, who called himself "Le Dieu de la Danse," always told his pupils to use all the coquetry they could.

Vestris, who founded the famous Vestris family, was an eighteenth century celebrity and quite remarkably conceited even for a dancer. "There are but three great men alive," he used to say, "myself, the Prussian Frederick and Voltaire." (It is interesting to compare Southey's remark that a male dancer deserves to be hamstrung.) That profession of which he was so proud is indeed an arduous one. Vestris used to practice for about six hours a day. A dancer must be extremely strong and supple.

A curious story is told about Fanny Elssler, a German dancer with coal black hair, which illustrates the extreme muscular strength a dancer requires. She was crossing to America when she entered her cabin one day and discovered a thief abstracting the jewel case which she kept hidden under her pillow. Before he could attack her she planted her foot full in his chest and killed him on the spot.

It is curious that no Englishwoman has ever achieved supreme success as a dancer. It is possible, as foreigners assert, that they lack the dramatic gift. It is certain that a lifelong devotion and arduous apprenticeship are essential to any expression through the medium of dancing. The "rats," the beginners at the Paris Opera, are articled for five years, and then, unless they have danced from their cradle, they cannot hope to attain the first rank.

Another quality essential to the great dancer is infinite patience. The only English dancer who ever gave promise of attaining the front rank failed in this respect. Lola Montez was the somewhat foreign name she had taken. She lost her temper one day with the manager at rehearsal and expressed her feelings so dramatically as to break an umbrella over his head. Managers will endure much for art's sake, but this was too much.

Carlotta Grisi is another famous name of the old opera. It was she who first introduced the polka into England—a Bohemian dance that came to stay. It was for her, too, that Heine, Gautier and Adolphe Adam collaborated in writing "Gisolle."

There were a score more famous names that were familiar words in those days. Of the twelve leading dancers engaged at the King's theater in 1824 for a two months' season five were a sufficient attraction to receive more than £1,000 each.—London Mail.

Some Worms Are Curious.

The most curious creature of the worm family is the diplozoon, a singular parasite which infests the gills of several species of fish, particularly the bream. Each individual diplozoon has two distinct bodies united in the middle so as to form a perfect St. Andrew's cross, each half of the creature containing precisely the same kind of organs—viz., an alimentary canal, a nervous system, reproductive organs, etc.

READING THE TREE.

How the Forester Gets Its Life History In Detail.

The forester reads the history of a tree in great detail, says the American Magazine. After taking out a few "borings" to the center of the tree at different heights and counting the rings on them he may spin you such a yarn as this:

"This tree is 150 years old (150 rings at the base). During the first five years it grew only seven inches (115 rings, seven inches from the base). Evidently it then began to touch crowns with other saplings, for it took a spurt and put on fifteen inches a year steadily till it was forty years old (forty rings forty-four and one-half feet above the ground). It was not growing as fast as its neighbors, however, for at this point it began to be overshadowed, and its growth declined for the next ten years to as little as four inches a year (forty-five rings at forty-eight feet and fifty at fifty feet). Just in time to save its life something happened to its big neighbors, presumably a windstorm, and it resumed a steady growth of about six inches a year, having passed its fastest growing time. Its growth in thickness doesn't seem to have varied much, about an inch every three years. But it grew faster and faster in volume, of course, as its height increased—a little over a cubic foot a year in its prime of life, I should judge. About thirty years ago it reached maturity and stopped growing in height (thirty rings at the top of the main stem), and now it is approaching old age (the last rings are pretty thin). Hold on a minute—here's a false ring, twenty, forty, forty-six years back; two very thin rings see—instead of one thick one; means that something interrupted the growing season, probably a late frost."

The Drug Clerk.

In the old days the drug clerk spent his spare moments in pounding leaves and barks for the production of tinctures and extracts that are now supplied by wholesale manufacturers. When he had nothing else to do he made ointment and rolled pills. The mortar and pestle were the universal sign of the trade. But the diverse modern activities of the pharmacist more than compensate for the earlier details of toil. It is still a time honored practical jest to ask the apprentice to powder ten pounds of camphor in a mortar. After sweating at his task for an hour or two he learns that camphor won't powder, though it is readily soluble in alcohol.—New York Tribune.

Lucky.

"Of course, like most of your class," remarked the cynical cad, "you are superstitious. No doubt you consider the horseshoe a sign of good luck."

"It is," replied the sporting gent, "if it goes under the wire first on your horse."—Philadelphia Press.

Of Absorbing Interest.

"Aside from the principle involved and in addition thereto," remarked the great financier, "the banking business is one of absorbing interest."—Toledo Blade.

We dare not trust our wit for making our house pleasant to our friends and so we buy ice cream.—Emerson.

There is no policy like politeness since a good manner often succeeds where the best tongue has failed.
